Use parking spaces in a manner that does not impede others; Do not park your car in locations not specified for parking

Heirs options in case the death of the lessee

When death occurs, "God forbid", the heirs should directly notify the service centers and return the car to the bank where the bank employee will inform the family legal representative of all the options available, including:

- Paying all amounts due and in this case ownership of the car will be transferred to the heir who all the other heirs have waived their rights to.
- The heirs waive their rights to one heir through a waiver of rights deed issued from a specialized court, whereby the assigned heir is entitled to assume entitlement of the contract provided he/she signs all the required documents and abides by its terms and conditions and is eligible to the credit regulations that the bank specifies.
- The heirs return the car immediately after the death of the lessee and terminate the contract without demanding any dues on the car. The bank has the right to claim from the heirs to pay any premiums or amounts due in the event of use of the car from the date of the client's death or beyond.

Maintaining the car (maintenance, modifications, use)

As the car is owned by the bank and leased to you under the lease contract, to be transferred to you at the end of the lease contract after total repayment, maintaining the car will benefit you and help you avoid many of the difficulties that might happen during the leasing period.

Regular maintenance:

Conduct periodic maintenance as per the car agent specified maintenance schedule to avoid many of the costly mechanical failures and disruption, and keeps the car's performance and value when selling.

Modifications to the car:

Do not modify or add any mechanical or electrical parts to the car or its structure to avoid violation of the contract and cancellation of the insurance and the extended agent's warranty, as well as not to cancel the extended warranty of the bank.

Examples of the amendments: Changing the color of the car, installing additional lights or modifying the engine or other mechanical parts.

Misuse of the car:

The car is not to be re-leased to any one or used for other than its specified purpose (for personal use and the use by members in accordance to the commercial activity of the establishments and companies), and it is not allowed for people who are not authorized to drive the car.

Always use the seat belt when driving
